

This information means spinach processors other than Natural Selections have not been implicated. FDA has cleared all fresh spinach products other than those from this one processing plant of Natural Selection Foods.

Farr spent this morning in conference with both the FDA and the USDA, including the Secretary of Agriculture, Mike Johanns. These discussions were part of a regular communications circle Farr set up right at the start and in response to the spinach situation.

"This means everyone should go out and eat spinach tonight," quipped Farr, "a lot of it! Go Popeye!"
